

WEEKLY NEWSLETTER

March 28th-April 1st

It's exhibition week! We started our Monday launch by picking a character trait to focus on, this week's trait being resilience as the Eagles faced many challenges during their preparation for the exhibition. We continued our launch by talking about our goals and intentions for the upcoming week, making sure the Eagles could support each other as much as possible.

For those of you following March Mammal Madness, we're down to the final four! We'll know the winners of that round Next Monday!

In the Spring, we like to make sure we incorporate Gardening into our weekly activities, but unfortunately we weren't able to do much this week due to the rain. We look forward to getting back in the garden after break, finishing cleaning it up and getting to plant!

Quest

Quest this week was all about finishing up any assignments and then getting prepared for the exhibition. In Detective Science, they focused on DNA extraction and The Navigators solved a crime in real time at the exhibition to show their mastery, using the help of the Foundation Eagles who were all subject matter experts in an area of forensic science. In Medical Biology, the Launchpaders continued to practice diagnosing patients, which they then did live at the exhibition. They finished up creating and got to share their presentation on one system of the body as well. All the eagles really enjoyed getting to interact with and show the community all the hard work they've put into their quest this session!

Some of the other work the Eagles decided to exhibit were a few history and art assignments. In history this week, the Navigator and Launchpad had a focus on all the protests of 1968 and the government's response to them. The Foundation continued learning about the Greeks, reading about the rivalry between Sparta and Athens! For the last week of fiber art, the Eagles were able to choose their favorite kind of fiber art from this session and continue working on it.

History and Art

Writers workshop

For writers workshop, The Foundation finished writing their mystery stories and read them aloud around the fire at the exhibition! Navigator and Launchpad self and peer edited their articles for Journalism, then created a tri fold display for their section of the newspaper. Some Eagles decided to show some of their weekly journals as well, further showing all their impressive writing abilities.

We ended our week by having a badge ceremony, exhibition reflection, and Fun Friday! On Thursday, we had our badge ceremony, celebrating all the badges the Eagles earned this session and then got to display at the exhibition. After the exhibition we do a reflection, making time for the Eagles to discuss with each other what they liked about the exhibition or what might need improvement next time. To end the week and as a final send off before break, we had Fun Friday for the whole school. This week's Fun Friday activity was a scavenger hunt resulting in a walk to get ice cream!
